KAREN FOLEY: On the 21st of October from 12:00 until 13:30, we have a live online interactive event, ‘Beginning your MBA with the OU’, here at the Student Help Live.

This live, online, interactive event is for those who are just starting their MBA journey, as well as those who are already on their pathway who may want to refresh their skills.

We're going to have three half-hour interlink sessions. And we'll look at those through the lenses of professional and personal development.

We'll focus on things like preparing for work with your MBA studies, learning technologies and also being an MBA student.

I'll be joined by a panel of guests from across the university, who will draw on their academic, industry and student perspectives; and also colleagues from other areas of the university, like the Library and Careers and Employability services, who'll be able to answer your questions in our live chat.

Student Help Live events are all online, interactive, and open to everyone. And they're a great way to meet members of staff, and also other students.

To find out more, you can visit the website, which is also where you access the event when it is live. I hope you can join us.
