KAREN FOLEY: As we move into our next 50 years, the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences has exciting new qualifications and modules for you to study across a range of subjects from October 2019. On the 10th of June, meet the academics who’ve been involved in researching and writing them to help you plan your studies at our online event.

We'll explore the new degrees in criminology and sociology and religion, philosophy, and ethics, and also delve into the new core level 1 modules, discovering the Arts and Humanities and Introduction to Criminology. There are also some great new modules at level 2 and 3 where we'll be looking at telling stories-- modern political ideas, environmental policy, economics and context, and so much more.

The event is online at the Student Hub Live, which is the OU's live, online, interactive platform. And anyone is welcome to log in at any point in the programme. At these events, you can watch the discussion in the studio, talk to others, and share your own views.

If you have a question you’d like to add some advance, just email us. And if you can't attend on the date, you can watch on the catch-up afterwards. It’s a great chance to meet other students and staff in a virtual space, and I hope you can join us then.
