KAREN FOLEY: On the 11th of March, the Open University are holding a live online interactive event that's open to all. We'll tackle the topic of student satisfaction, which is an important concept in higher education for universities but, more importantly, for students. So will unpick this idea of satisfaction. Think about what this can mean to you as a learner, both in terms of your studies and the way that study fits into your life more generally.

We'll also talk about the idea of community and connection with others. And it's an ideal space to do that, because you can talk to others in the live chats and share your experiences. The Student Hub Live is the Open University's live online interactive platform. And anyone is welcome to join at any point in the programme.

At these events, you can watch the discussion in the studio, talk to others in a chat, and share your own views. If you have a question you'd like to ask in advance, just email us. And if you can't attend on the day, you can catch up afterwards.

It's going to be a great event. And I really hope that you can join me then.
