KAREN FOLEY: On the 30th of September, we have a live, online interactive induction and orientation event at the Open University's Student Hub Live, where we'll fill you in on all the info you need as a new student to the OU. We'll introduce you to staff and other students and talk through some of the important details, like what happens at tutorials, how to make the most of learning online, and top tips for managing your time. We'll also share what's worked for some of us in the past and focus on important issues, like getting your friends and family on-site to support your study. And we'll have fun playing the Wheel of Ologies quiz, learning more about the OU's mission, and, most importantly, connecting you with other students and answering all of your questions.

The event is online, interactive, and open to all OU students. Find out more on our website, which is also where you log on to join. If you can't attend the live event, catch up later on our YouTube channel, where you'll be able to view the recordings, along with all of our previous live sessions. But I hope you can join us on the 30th of September.
